

2005 Otolaryngology Training Examination

March 5, 2005

Introduction

The Otolaryngology Training Examination (OTE) is a closed-book, proctored, timed examination offered once a year to all interested practitioners and residents in the specialty. The exam will be administered at more than 100 test sites on Saturday, March 5, 2005.

Any resident, practicing otolaryngologist-head and neck surgeon, or other interested physician may register for the OTE.

Purpose

The OTE provides a confidential assessment of current knowledge in all areas of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery. Exam results identify strengths and weaknesses. Exam scores are confidential for practitioners; resident scores are reported to training programs.

Residents and their program directors use the OTE to establish a baseline of specialty knowledge at the beginning of training, and to monitor changes in that knowledge over time. It is inappropriate for program directors to use this measure of resident performance as the sole form of assessment when evaluating residents for advancement. Rather, it is appropriate for program directors to use the aggregate performance of their residents when evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of their educational program.

Test Sites

The OTE is given at training programs throughout the US and Canada. Check the Test Sites list on the following pages for a convenient test site location.

Score Reporting

Candidates receive a complete profile of their performance. Results will be mailed by May 6, 2005. To help candidates understand their performance, they may print the "Understanding Your Score Report" from the ABOto website at www.aboto.org.
